CALL FOR EDITORS for ASIA IN FOCUS JOURNAL

Why join our Editorial Committee?

Asia in Focus provides editors with a unique opportunity to support early career researchers in getting a good start to their working life within academia. We pride ourselves on giving detailed, constructive and critical feedback and aim to set students up for success, whether their submission ends up being published or not.

The Editorial Committee is made up of an international team of reviewers and administrators based in the Nordic region, and our external expert review team is global. We are presently looking to recruit three new members for the Editorial Committee.

Apply to become a member of the Editorial Committee

As a member of the Editorial Committee, you will keep abreast with the most recent work being done in your own regional, methodological and/or thematic field of enquiry, and also play a significant role in shaping the work being done in related fields.

Members of the Editorial Committee must:

- have solid expertise on one or more region/country of Asia
- be affiliated to a Nordic institute of higher education
- be usually resident in the Nordic region
- have completed a doctoral degree

Once you join the team, you will:

- be identified as a member of the Editorial Committee on all Asia in Focus platforms
- be expected to attend two editorial meetings per issue, via Skype or face-to-face.
- be expected to review between 1 and 3 papers per issue
- participate actively in the evolution of the journal on a practical and strategic level

Include in your application your full CV and a short cover note detailing

- biographical information
- your interest in the position you are applying for
- a description of your research interests (country/regional focus; theoretical and methodological interests and expertise)

We are particularly interested in recruiting editors with research interests in literature, the arts, popular culture and ITC.

Email your application to Nicol Savinetti by 30 September 2018: asiainfocus@nias.ku.dk
