The clash of nationalisms in Northeast Asia: Roundtable event on the 2012 Diplomatic Dispute between China-Japan

Thursday 20th of September 2012, 14:00-16:00
Frokoststuen/Lunch Room, 4.2.26

Diplomatic tensions between these two regional powers have important implications for the security and stability of East Asia. Will the events of 2012 lead to another all-time low between China and Japan? Are the two states destined for a protracted rivalry as China rises? Are both states hostage to an increasingly xenophobic nationalism that views each other with antipathy? This Roundtable, hosted by the Department of Political Science at the University of Copenhagen, will invite a number of experts on Asian international relations to explore the domestic and international contexts of the latest row between China and Japan.

Speakers

- Shogo Suzuki (Department of Political Science, University of Copenhagen): Reading the Tea Leaves of Sino-Japanese Relations: where will the bilateral relation go from now?

- Karl Gustafsson (Centre for East and South-East Asian Studies, Lund University): Anti-Japanese Nationalism and Protest in China: the context and significance

- Björn Jerdén (The Swedish Institute of International Affairs): Sino-Japanese Relations: mutual accommodation or antagonism?

Following the roundtable the Department is pleased to invite everybody to a reception at CSS 4.2.26.
